We used to like to think of krab as a revolutionary experiment in radio, but*revolutionary (or experimental) can you be after four years, especially when you can't find tonight's tape because it got left under the commentary list for last month which was on the coffee machine behind the talk given last month by that man from California on Civil Rights and Zen Buddhism (or was it 'Existentialism and the Grateful Dead!')(what was his name?) which got tangled up in the microphone cord which should be working but has a hum or bug in it somewhere, at least that's what Volunteer Tape Man (long-suffering, droopy moustache) told us, and he should know, because he spent goddam this five minutes at the last conference on Black Power. (or was it Northwest Power) trying to get the jesus-bitten tape machine to work which wouldn't, because the power cord got jammed under the 40kv condenser which burned out (or was burned out by) the Light Show, behind the stack of announcements for the Maraphlop which got mailed out three days after the Maraflop because the printer got his finger jammed in the printing press finger-jammer; which was understandable because the rubber roller had been pirated to make the 1941 tape recorder roll, only the heads had dropped through the EBS monitor onto the transmitter amplifier underneath which made the rectifiers blow hot and cold running sparks all over the control room, which traumatized the first-week new volunteer who had only wanted to learn enough showbiz to go to work for KOL, but who was now considerably older since he had reached down to push the red button lying on the floor to turn off the emergency speaker which was blatting out Arlene Francis, and when he grabbed the naked wire, poor soul, bare-bottom button, he squawked a bit and banged into the frequency monitor which meter and krab then deviated about ten megacycles which (TO PAGE 11)
